Visit the Carlile School in the Second Ward and Inspect Work

A very helpful and intertaining mothers' meeting was beld in the second ward, Carlile school building yesterday afternoon from a until 4 o'clock.

The mothers of the first and second grade children met with Misses Rowley and Jackson; those of the third and fourth grade children with Misses Nuzum and Cokeley; those of the fifth and sixth grade children with Misses Snider and Martz, and those of the seventh and eighth grade children with Misses Spahr and Gor-

By having these sectional meetings the mothers and teachers were able to get better acquainted and discuss questions more freely relating to the bringing the school and home into nutual sympathy.

There were about fifty-five persons present who participated in the discussions.

Mrs. Harding read an excellent paper on "What the mother expects from the teacher and how she can help the teacher," which was heartly discussed in the first and second grade section. Following are other topics that were discussed in the different sections: language of children, medical inspection, proper punishment street courtesy, home study, obedince, writing, etc.

Since Friday afternoon is such busy time with the majority of mothers, it was decided to have subsequent meetings earlier in the week, thereby securing a larger attendance While these are called "mothers meetings" the fathers are also cordially invited whenever they can get an afternoon off.

RURAL CARRIER

Examination for Three Routes in This County is Held Here.

A civil service examination of applicants for appointment as rural mail carriers on the Shinnston, Bridgeport and Dola routes in this county was held Saturday in the federal building by Clarence L. Gardner, local secretary of the Civil Service Commission of the United States. There were fourteen applicants, seven of whom were from Bridgeport, two from Shinnston and five from Dola. Their manuscripts will be sent to the Civil Service Commission at Washington and examined. Those who make the required grades will be placed on the eligible list.
